STUCK HATPIN INTO A MASHER.

Kansas Girl Gave an Elderly Exponent of the "Goo-Goo Eye" a Hard Jab in a Fifth Avenue Coach.

NOT A CARRIE NATIONITE.

But She Belleves in Reforming the Gotham Ogler, Who, to Her Mind, is a Greater Evil Even than the Kansas Hobo.

A blue-eyed girl, a hatpin, a Fifth avemue stage and a well-dressed man of fifty were the constituents of , short but absorbing drama to-day which re-sulted in a new method of exterminating the masher evil being introduced. The blue-eyed girl was Miss Leoti Blaker and she ran a hatpin into the masher's arm with such violence that the occupants of the coach were thrown into confusion by the screams of the elderly stickee.

Miss Blaker comes from Kansas and has only been in New York a few days. She is stopping with Mrs. Margaret MacGuire in West One Hundred and Eleventh street.

"If New York women will tolerate mashing, Kansas girls will not," sald Miss Blaker indignantly to an Evening World reporter afterward. "I got on the Fifth avenue coach at Twenty-third street and sat down next to an elderly looking man in the corner. I didn't pay any attention to him but finally his actions became so annoying that could scarcely stand it.

"I was embarrassed, of course, and kept edging up in the corner. I don't could have beloed, seeing how dreadful he was. Finally he put his arm back per lip, with a face that refused to alter were all huddled up together.

"He was such a nice looking old gen tleman I was sorry to hurt him, but it seems that the benevolent looking old men are the worst mashers here in New York. Why, he was dressed perfectly lovely and didn't look a bit filtratious.

"I've heard about Broadway mashers and 'L' mashers, but I didn't know Fifth avenue had a particular brand of its own. Out in Oskaloosa a man would be tarred and feathered for daring to insult a woman by such persistent actions.

Miss Blaker is excedingly pretty. She says she is no relation to Carrie Nation and that her hatpin reform in no way is an echo of the hatchet brigadier's movements.

The police waited for Perry to come home. He did so to-day and was gathered in. He is twenty-two years old and of prepossessing appearance. He was taken to headquarters. The police say his picture is in the Rogues' gallery. Mr. Morgan, it is said, engaged Perry on the strength of what purported to be a recommendation from the Yale

FOSTER IN ROW

District-Attorney Protests Vainly Against Suspension of Sentence in Case of H. C. Wilson-Chief Clerk U. S. Engineers.

CONVICTED OF EXTORTION.

Lively War of Words Between the Court and Prosecuting Officer, but the Judge Would Not Budge from His Position.

There was a lively row in the Court of General Sessions to-day between Judge Foster and the District-Atorney. With a face pale with anger, the Dis-trict-Attorney tried to tell the Judge what he believed to be the duty of the Court, and, incensed at the attitude taken by Mr. Jerome, the Judge sat with drawn features and loked at him. When the District-Attorney had finished the Court announced that it proposed to do what it conceived to be its duty, and suspended sentence on Henry C. Wilson, Chief Clerk of the United States Enginer Corps, who was conrioted of attempted extortion.

Wilson was in the employ of the Government when contracting work was seing done for the city. The contractors obtained the use of Government was trapped and convicted.

After the control of the Shepherd, on Chelsea Square. Attorney-General Beck, who won the Shepherd, on Chelsea Square.

Northern Pacific merger suit for the Government, became interested, with George Gordon Bastle, in Wilson's behalf. Mr. Beck raised the point that Rev. Leighton Coleman, of Delaware;

The Judge was not allowed to finish the sentence, Mr. Jerome interrupting heatedly:
"It strikes me that this is a most extraordinary proposition. He is a thief or he is not a thief. He stands to-day a convicted felom. According to your ideas he has yieldated no law." or he is not a thief. He stands to-day a chivicted felon. According to your ideas he has violated no law.

"You mistake me, Mr. District-Attorney," said Judge Foster feelingly. "He has violated the law of the State and Federal Government. But feeling as I do I am unwilling to pass sentence upon this defendant. There is no doubt as to his moral gwilt, but in my judgment he has been severely punished."

Not walting for him to finish, Mr. Jerome was on his feet again. He was visibly agitated.

"Judge Foster, with all respect," said he, "Are you going to pronounce judgment without passing upon the motion pending before you to dismiss this case and the one for a new trial. Gravely as I would regret it, I would much prefer to have a new trial granted to the man than to have the court brought into disrespect. Your honor allows this man to stand a convicted felon when you say he is not."

"But I understand counsel for the defendant withdrew their motions." Interrupted the Court.

"That is not true," shouted Mr. Jerome. Then turning to Mr. Beck and Mr. Battle, he said, "Is it true you are willing to let your client go forth a convicted felon, when the judge says he is notw"

"We are satisfied." said Mr. Battle, "We are satisfied." said Mr. Battle, "To the said Mr. Battle, "We are satisfied."

"We are satisfied," said Mr. Battle, while Mr. Beck pulled him into a chair and replied:
